The work of feld72 pivots on the interface of architecture, applied urbanism and art. feld72 has implemented numerous projects of various dimensions in the national and international context, a huge range including master plans, buildings, studies on urban development, interior and exhibition design, urban strategies and large-scale interventions in the urban environment.

The multiple award-winning works are remarkable for a socially responsible, innovative and sustainable approach to architecture and urbanism. Tracking down and reinforcing the potential in locations and (social) environments is a fundamental element of feld72 projects.

“...there is no break between the theoretical and experimental projects of feld72 and their designs for buildings: all of their work, irrespective of scale or means, investigates how the world is engaged and perceived through the lens of architecture. And there is an architectural lesson we can draw from this work, namely that the essence of architecture is nothing architectural.”

Kari Jormakka in “Theory and design in the Fourth Machine Age. On the experimental projects by feld72”, published in “feld72. urbanism – for sale.” (Ed. Lilli Hollein), Springer WienNewYork 2007

feld72's work is centered around the concept of social space. The collective focuses on fostering communal interaction within built structures and identifying and activating spatial potential. Their overarching theme addresses architectural questions related to societal and eco-social challenges.

feld72 continuously explores topics such as urban and rural migration, affordability, and community, translating these into architectural solutions characterized by a deep sensitivity to place and scale. This approach consistently informs their building designs and executions, theoretical and experimental projects, as well as their academic teaching. At the core of their work is the creation of spaces for communal living in both urban and rural settings, with a focus on housing, educational buildings, and public spaces. Materiality also plays a key role in their projects: translating concepts and strategies into tangible, impactful architecture.

Current projects include two first-prize-winning entries (2024) in subsidized housing in Vienna: Nachbarschaftsbrücke, which focuses on sustainable circular construction and leverages the potential of existing structures, and Wiener Luft at the Nordwestbahnhof, which achieves comprehensive CO₂ neutrality from design through production, construction, and operation.

Recently completed educational buildings are the Jean Mentelin Educational Complex in Strasbourg, opened in autumn 2024, and Kindergarten Algund in Italy (2023), realized with a fully ecological construction approach. The raiffeisen corner headquarters in St. Pölten (2022) combines workspaces with hybrid public spaces in a highly flexible design.

Since its founding in 2002, feld72 has gained recognition with its self-initiated project series Urbane Strategien, which explores questions of the use and perception of public space. These experimental projects transcend the conventional frameworks of classical architecture.

Already in 2006, feld72 reanimated a southern Italian village, affected by rising vacancy rates, with the Million Donkey Hotel by involving the residents and using local resources and economy. Since 2003, the collective has contributed to numerous exhibitions with works exploring questions about the potential of spaces for communal living. Recent projects include Social. Spaces. Matter. at the Shibaura House in Tokyo, Japan (April 2024), and at the Aedes Architecture Forum in Berlin (May 2023), as well as their contribution to the 15th International Architecture Exhibition at the Venice Biennale (2016).

Since 2010, feld72 has also been involved in teaching, including a workshop in 2024 at the Tokyo Institute of Technology, Japan / since 2011 lecturing at Research Unit of Building Theory and Design, Institute of Architecture and Design, Faculty of Architecture and Planning, TU Wien / Since 2018 professorship for Housing and Design, Institute of Architecture and Design, Faculty of Architecture and Planning, TU Wien.

The work of feld72 has received numerous awards, including the Prize for Architecture of the City of Vienna AT (2024) / European Collective Housing Award ES (1st edition) – finalist 2024 / Medaglia d'Oro all'Architettura IT (2018) / and several Austrian State Prizes, including the State Prize for Architecture (2018), Architecture & Sustainability (2013), and Experimental Trends in Architecture (2002). Additionally, their project Million Donkey Hotel was honored as one of the 25 best projects in the world in the Architectural Review Awards for Emerging Architecture UK (2009).

*feld72 was founded in 2002 by the architects Anne Catherine Fleith (*1975 Colmar, FR), Michael Obrist (*1972 Bolzano, IT), Mario Paintner (*1973 Klagenfurt, AT), Richard Scheich (*1972 Launceston, AUS) and Peter Zoderer (1973 Bolzano, IT).
